Egypt, to the vv~w frontiers of I ndia. In the prosecution of these conquests, Nebuchadnezzar directed his arms chiefly against the nations to the west of theE uphrates, and Cyaxares against those to the east of the Tygris; where, after having subdued all the countries in the neighbourhood of the Caspian sea, he chased theS cythians into the wilds of Sarmatia2. Concerning the state of the vast regions to the east of the Tygris, at this early period, we have little information, that can be depended on. But the case is very different, in regard to the countries to the west of theE uphrates. There the most interesting spectacles are presented to our view, by historians both sacred and civil, during the century that preceded the destruction of Nineveh. The Assyrian monarchs, from the foundation of their empire, appear to have claimed dominion, and i shadowing shroud, and of an high stature, and his top was among the thick boughs. The waters made him great; the deep set him upon high, with her rivers running round about his plants, and sent out her little rivers unto all the trees of the field. Therefore his height was exalted above all the trees of the field, and his bought were multiplied, and his branches became long, because of the multitude of waters, when he shot forth. All the fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young, and under his shadow dwelt all great nations. Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches; for his root was by great waters .(E zek. chap. xxxi. ver. 37.). But, because his heart is lifted up in his height, adds the prophet, in the name of theL ord, I have de livered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen. And strangers, the terrible of the nations, have cut him off. Upon the mountains, and in all the valleys, his branches ar(Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and dont occur in the
